

Bio:

Nev Jones, PhD is an assistant professor in the School of Social Work and affiliate assistant professor in the Department of Psychiatry at the University of Pittsburgh. A mental health services researcher focused on public sector services for serious mental illness (SMI), her work is grounded in personal and family experience of schizophrenia and associated service systems. Dr. Jones' research has been continuously funded by the National Institute of Mental Health and she currently leads an R01 focused on employment and public benefit trajectories in early psychosis and is co-leading a New York Office of Mental Health-sponsored evaluation of Assisted Outpatient Treatment across New York State. Her formal academic training is interdisciplinary and includes social and political philosophy, community psychology, psychiatric rehabilitation, and medical anthropology.